Environmental Advisory Service

It is becoming increasingly important for organisations to demonstrate their commitment to the environment.

The Environmental Advisory Service will help you to identify improvements in your systems that could lead to increased profitability and a positive corporate reputation.

Want to increase your business competitiveness?

It is widely accepted that effective environmental management can lead to financial savings through better waste management and recycling, as well as reduced bills from careful energy use.

The British Safety Council's Environmental Advisors take a systematic approach to identifying potential sources of pollution and waste. They give guidance on establishing procedures to reduce the potential risks that your business activities pose to the environment.

What we offer

By providing sound and practical advice to organisations of every size and type, we will not only help your organisation benefit from financial savings, we'll help you comply with the law.

You can choose a single appointment, four quarterly visits, or visits as and when required. The British Safety Council's advisors will assess key factors that your organisation needs to manage in order to comply with environmental legislation.

Our key strength is flexibility

The British Safety Council's advisors have expertise and experience in a variety of sectors including:

- Construction sites
- Sports grounds
- Hotels
- Transport
- Utilities
- Offices
- Factories
- Hospitals
- Local authorities
- Schools and colleges

The advisory service is flexible and can cover specific areas of environmental management, or, if required, can build a complete environmental management system.
