

Lynda Armstrong OBE
Chair of Trustees
British Safety Council

Lynda took up the position of Chair in October 2010 having worked for Royal Dutch Shell for 35 years in operational and management roles in oil and gas exploration, and petroleum engineering and production.

Her most recent position was technical vice president, leading a global technical advice and study organisation with centres in the Netherlands, USA, UK, India and Qatar.

Previous assignments have included new business development director for Shell UK and exploration director for Petroleum Development Oman. She is experienced in managing operations in a safety critical industry. She has also led several major business improvement and restructuring programmes to enhance operating performance.

