

James Mansbridge
Head of Digital Learning
British safety Council

James is the Head of Digital Learning at the British Safety Council, and has worked at the company for three years.

Prior to that, he worked as a digital learning developer and award-winning trainer in the telecom sector. James first became interested in digital learning while teaching in the far east. After spending several years teaching maths and physics, he moved into a senior leadership role and led a digital learning programme in a bilingual high school in Bangkok. He is passionate about technology in teaching having seen its ability to make learning more engaging, more inclusive, and more effective.

James Mansbridge
Head of Digital Learning
British safety Council